Dr. Patterson's address was the feature of the evening. He was minutes on arrival, and again at th close of a fighting speech in which he stated the issues clearly and without rancor.

SAYS PUBLIC AROUSED

The flood of money released by the Administration in pre-election road programmes, public works and in other ways was reacting heavily against the Government, Dr. Patterson declared. Throughout the province electors were alarmed by CANBERRA, May 20 (7).—The rederal Cabinet today planned erection of a memorfal at Broome to Captain William Dampier, who landed in Australia in January 1888

Reforms must come, and that they shall be based upon sane lines of economy is the only hope that British Columbia has left today. The only promises we make are capable of fulfilment and, if given the power, will be carried out," Dr. Patterson continued.

TIME TO HALT

"We are living in times of change." he old remedies will not do. Brit-sh Columbia must have a change of government if we are to stop this waste and extravagance, and bor-rowing that is driving us daily further into the hole. POINTS TO OUTLAYS

"As others have told you, the Government is spending $7,000,000 more than it has collected. There is the entirely unnecessary outlay of $4,000,000 for a supernumary bridge over the Fraser River at New Westminster, where there were already a substantial bridge, and on top of that there was the and on top of that there was the $5,000,000 loan bill, out of which came the $3,000,000 loan; a loan I

Dr. Patterson declared Continuing, the Conservative leader asserted that industrial and business recovery had recommenced in British Columbia, not by virtue of any governmental policies, but in spite of them. ### AIMS OF PARTY ARE REVIEWED the B.C. Constructives stand was given by Mrs. Margaret Hall, one of the Victoria candidates of the party in the present political campaign, at a women's meeting held in the Victoria Truth Centre, Fort Street, Wednesday afternoon.

Introduced to the meeting by Dr. Randall-Colyer, Sydney, Australia, Mrs. Hall briefly summarized these ideals as finance administered on sound business basis, intelligent conservation of natural resources, the general adoption of the co-operative principle, doing away with olitical patronage, equal distribution of taxation, and honesty and fficiency in administrative office.

She particularly elaborated the principle of co-operation. Peace and security in the home was a fundamental ideal. After this came peace security in the home was a fundamental ideal. After this came peace and security in one's own city, the province, the state, and eventually throughout the world. This ideal could only be accomplished by cothroughout the world. This ideal could only be accomplished by coperation, the union for forces. There was the accomplishment of universal thinking as well as the accomplishment of universal thinking as well as the accomplishment of universal effort accomplishm in the material sense, and it was cheering to realize that the world today was more ready to accept the rightness of this idea of co-operarightness of this idea of co-opera-tion, whether as affecting the indi-vidual or the state, and interna-tional relations, Mrs. Hall stated. CO-OPERATIVE MOVEMENT

Among some of the countries where the co-operative movement was to be found as applied to in-dustries, production and distribu-tion, were Great Britain, France, the United States, the Scandinavian the United States, the Scandinavian countries, Poland, Finland, China, Korea and Western Australia. #### MATURING PROVINCIAL OBLIGATIONS

There is no question of graver concern to the voters of British Columbia than the financial problem. The expenses of government have been ounting at an alarming rate; so has the debt. For the spendthrift zeal which has marked administration here there is a day of reckoning in the offing: the liabilities that have been accumulating have to be met, or else there must be conversion of loans to postpone the time of settle-ment by spreading the obligations on the shoulsterity. None of the candidates in the present election campaign has emphasized the fact that loans totaling $100,000,000 will fall due geen now and 1941, that is, within four years within the time of the Government which assume power after June 1. The task of that Government will be to find a way to meet these obligations, or else to postpone their payment to a more convenient season. It should be axiomatic for those seeking office to explain what their purpose would be in this particular.

As a preliminary to bringing about any plans for conversion of loans which will mature during. the next four years there should be a system of drastic economy put into effect. The Conservative Party is the only one in the election camnaign which has promised, if returned to power, to take steps in this direction. The economies will have to be drastic. British Columbia has obviously pledged itself beyond its means, for it is most certain that the loans to fall due cannot be liquidated. There must be some policy of conn, and no such policy will be likely until some time after the era of spendthrift zeal is at an end. It may not be possible until there are very substantial reductions in the present cost

The financial interests to whom this Province must look for relief in the matter of its obligations cannot regard the present situation as satisfactory. They are aware that for a Province containing a population of little over 700,000 persons the cost of administration is excessive They want to see that administration placed on a business basis. They want to see the sinking funds maintained progressively intact. They will only be inclined to entertain conversion proposals if, and when, there have been widespread economies and a general disposition on the part of whatever Government is in power after the next election to maintain the credit of British Columbia in every possible way.

The issue of the campaign should be one of nomy in government, because British Columbia has to meet obligations amounting to $100, 000,000 within the next four years. It is an enormous sum for a Province of this size. The present Government has made no effort to emphasize this problem of the future, and yet it is the solution of it which transcends all other matters of policy if the credit of this Province is to be maintained intact.

GOVERNMENTAL SPORT ARENAS

One of the Liberal candidates in this city advocates a chain of sport arenas across the Dominion, constructed jointly by the Federal and Provincial Governments. There are not Federal atters at stake in the present provincial election campaign, and why the question of Federal help for such a project should be raised is of the academic variety. Governmental construction of sport arenas would imply governmental control of sport, something that will not appeal in any sense to sportsmen.

The question of Federal control of sports was raised during the late session at Ottawa. It was brought up in the form of a resolution by Mr Hugh Plaxton. The general impression was that don on the subject was just a waste of time, and Mr. Power, the Minister of Pensions and Public Health, could see no virtue in the proposal. He refused to entertain it. The voters in the coming election in British Columbia may dismiss any idea that Governments in Canada have money to provide "circuses" for the people. In ng on the question having been raised in the House of Commons, The Windsor Daily

"There is too much Federal control of this and that in Canada now, without adding sports to the list. If the young people of Canada are not competent to handle their own recreation of all kinds then it is just too bad for them. Certainly, as Mr. Power says, no governmental agency is re quired to instruct them; and the taxpayers have no idle funds with which to pay officials for this There would be no difficulty in securing the officials, of course-Mr. Plaxton could no doubt find a whole army of them in his own constituency and among his party workers—but digging up their salaries would be just another headache for Mr. Dunning, and the official would have no useful purpose to serve. Mr. Plaxton will have to think up something better than this in order to prove that he is of Cabinet

THE HEALTH INSURANCE BALLOT

It is a matter of common observation that politicians, promoters and advocates generally who have a weak case to support sometimes endeavour to conceal the weakness of their position by laying great stress, in a confident tone. not upon the real point at issue but upon something else more or less closely related to it. Of this type of fallacy it has been said that the argument begins well and ends well, but something happened to it in the middle. By the cunning use of this method of argumentation many unities have been tricked into voting for by-laws authorizing an expenditure of public money out of all proportion to the needs of the case or the benefits actually gained. For example, educational enthusiasts who want more and more public money spent on education do not invariably address themselves to the question as justified on commonsense economic lines. They prefer to dwell eloquently, but vaguely, upon the blessings and advantages of education in general and endeavour, not without success, to hold up to public scorn those who would, by their narrowness and parsimony, deprive the young and rising generation of their right to a proper start This line of argument and invective was used so frequently and so effectively in the era preceding the "depression" that it required some courage for a citizen to offer public oppo-sition to any educational by-law. As a consequence many a town and city in Canada today is struggling under an unnecessarily heavy load of school debenture debt.

The advocates of Provincial Health Insurance as conceived by the Pattullo Government, have adopted similar tactics. They confine their oratorical efforts largely to enconiums upon the value of good health to the individual and the unity, and do their best to make it appear that those who intend to vote "no" on the Health Insurance Ballot are hard-hearted, unsympathetic creatures who care nothing for the health or the general well-being of their neighbours. It is the old device over again, but age does not confer respectability upon an argument of that kind.

The real question at issue is not whether public health should or should not be conserved, but whether the next Legislature is to have a mandate to construct a new Health Insurance Act on even more ambitious lines than those of the present discredited and impossible Act. That is the real issue, and all that is now positively known regarding the matter is that if the mandate is given, our debt-laden Province will be plunged deeper than ever into the financial mire in the effort to administer the new Act.

A CENTENARY

This year is the centenary of Queen-Victoria's accession to the throne, and the anniversary should be marked in connection with the May 24 celebrations here, because this city was named after the great and well-beloved sovereign. The one streamed out to Bescon Hil desirability of this being done was pointed out several months ago by this newspaper, but, on the upturned faces of from twenty the eve of Victoria Day, there is but little that is planned in this particular. This valids and the aged stayed at home city is to celebrate, later this year, the and then not too willingly. Set seventy-fifth anniversary of its incorporation. but that fact should not prevent special recognition being accorded the memory of the Queen "ah's" ascended after the rockets in whose name was given to Victoria. What might be done now is not much, but the least that can eral miles away. Such was the May be expected is that the Provincial Government 24 celebration of the not-so-distan should flobdlight the statue of Her Majesty that past. It was a united community stands in Parliament Square. This would be a effort, voluntarily contributed, and gesture to show that her fame is not forgotten generously endowed with a carnival by a city so loyal to her memory. It is conceivable spirit not often recaptured since that visitors will come here to help Victoria celebrate the May 24 anniversary. #### S.P.C.A. TAG DAY

The devotion to duty of the Victoria branch of the B.C. Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals deserves very widespread commendation. It has a warm place in the hearts of everyone with humane feelings. Its work goes on steadily and unostentatiously through the years. It keeps watch and ward on behalf of dumb creation, sees that where there is wanton cruelty punishment will follow, and does a noble work as well in direct animal welfare. Such an institution is a credit to any community; it is part and parcel, indeed, of the gospel of loving kindness that illumines a materialistic world. The local branch is appealing for funds tomorrow by a tag day, and its efforts should receive the reward of public generosity sufficient to add to its fund so that there need be no relaxation of the humane

Note and Comment By Sandham Graves

In the opinion of some people who helped to build the town in the first place, Victoria has not seen a real May 24 celebration since the Royal Navy left Esquimait harbon many years ago. This, they will tell you on the street, without any dis paragement to those who have had charge of modern festivals, but with sincere regard for the all-in-one place type of entertainment that citizens used to provide, for the most part voluntarily and out of an united spirit. May 24 in those days, they will recall, consisted of a grand parade through city streets in the morning, in which every one owning a handsome vehicle decorated it with broom and other blossoms, and drove in the procession. The parade would wind its way through city streets, over the Causeway and out to Beacon Hill, where such judging white, and blue ribbons awarded

The parade, in those years, was often two miles long, and used to attract boatloads of excursionists from other Coast cities on the Straits and Sound. In the afternoon, the whole town went to the Gorge for a regatta by naval cutters, Indian war canoes, racing shells, canoe events; and a great deal of dust and refreshments were goodnaturedly swallowed by thousand of citizens lining the banks of the Gorge for a considerable distance of both sides. At night, again, every where rockets and flares illumined to thirty thousand people. Only in pieces on the top of the hill were seen by all, and the "oh's" and those days. That at least is what gate wickets face the public at every sections of the city, and what ev cursionists there are seem to headed mostly out of town. This may, perhaps, be one case where we could learn a useful lesson from the past. There is, between the two methods, all the difference between making a holiday and buying one seen in connection with sports and games of nearly every description Two decades ago people played games because they liked to do so and got enjoyment from the actua playing. Cash awards in any form were unknown for the most part Today our people seem to play most of their games as spectators from a grandstand, watching two team have the fun of the game. History points to a most alarming comparion, wherein Greece developed a nation of fine athletes, and Rome de generated into a nation of grand stand sitters who in the long rur demanded organized murder and animal-baiting for their afternoon' amusement. Amateur athletics once stood at the top of the tree, with the cardinal virtues of sportsman ship, self-effacement, team work and downright good training. On would not care to say that its opportunities had changed today, but one may say that public interest in the actual playing of games, and participation in friendly contests of physical prowess and skill has very sadly declined. We cannot blame it entirely on the motor car. and on such individual hobbies as golf. Back of it all, the playing acter. The more playing fields become idle, the harder will humanity have to work to restore the stiffening in the backbone of human gs which distinguishes a man from a hit-and-run driver.

Astronomers all over the world re watching with interest preparations for the mounting of a 200-incl scope, which, from a fixed spot in California, may bring into view light that started from its originating star one thousand million lightyears ago. A giant sixty-foot tubu lar mounting has now been made with the observer's post at the tor some six feet in diameter. The telescope will be mounted on what is believed to be the world's largest bearing, so that it may be turned to cover a wide range in the heavens. If expectations are justified, the 200-inch lens may carry man's vision twice as far into space as it has ever been possible before this. Not that observers at the new telescope will see twice as many new objects, but that they will see the light effect from a planetary universe many times that at pres ent within the focus of any instrument. A world of preconceived idea and theories await the mounting of the new telescope. Astronomers have been able to predict with som certainty many of the sights it will bring into view, through observa-tion of related effects on visible bodies in the skies. There will be proof and disproof on a wide range of matters ,and no doubt materia for argument for another 100 years to come. In every sense the mounting of the new telescope will be of world interest, and historic.

Mr. Wright told of the first actual discovery and preservation of a meteorite which occurred in Alsace in the year 1492. He also explained Halley's definition of a comet as the concentration of dis-

From observations an amateur could tell the density of meteoric material and also define the radiant

Flood Pictures to Be Shown Today At the Dominion

THE raging floods that recently devastated Western Ontario are shown clearly in The Daily Colonist -Universal Newsreel, commencing today on the Dominion Theatre screen. Farms, city dwellings, roadways and forest land were inundated by the hungry wat-ers and untold damage was wrought. The dedication of the me-our newly-crowned sovereign, shows as nothing else could

the place he held in the heart of the nation. Reverently silent crowds listened to the dedication crowds which, a dedication, crowds which, a few days later, would cheer his few days later, would cheer his son to the echo. Other scenes on the newsreel include the official opening of the Golden Gate Bridge, the giant_tele-scope mount, ready for ship-ment to the Coast, the gay May day parade in New York and the thrilling French air meet.

Grape Design Filet Cloth

MAYFAIR NEEDLE-ART DESIGN NO. 328

All the splendor and magnificence of a stately grape arbor is brought to the banquet or luncheon table by this easy-to-make filet cloth. You cannot imagine a more handsome design. The centre of the cloth is crocheted in squares which are joined together. When the centre is finished, the border is made and crocheted to the completed centre section. The squares are so designed that the motif repeats itself correctly from all angles—no right and wrong side and no up and down to the pattern. The border is most artistic—bunches of grapes and leaves being combined with slender tendrils to give grace and beauty. The pattern includes easy-to-understand crocheting instructions without abbreviations, detail chart of design and stitches used.

The very few old and intimate friends who had known Martha. Ancell as a bride remembered her as a big and clumsy and boisterously cheerful person who had been completely and foolishly in love with her husband. But years of silent brooding had worked a marked change in Martha. Embittered by the loss of Anthony's love, her good humor had long since given place to a morose malevolence. She lived in a swelter of self-commiseration and hated her husband with hatred which any competent allenist which any competent allenist would have described as a highly dangerous aberration.

Once, a year or two ago, Anthony had said to her at dinner one evening. "You murder me with your eyes every time you look at me, Martha. Why not put poison in my coffee and get it out of your system?" And Martha had replied in her deep monotone, "There's poison enough in my system to kill you a thousand times over—but why should I want to kill you when I can hold you over the fires as I'm doing now? You can't divorce me and you don't dare have some of your gangster friends put me out of the way for fear your crime will catch up with you and spoll your fun. Oh, no, my beloved. We go on like this—to the end."

Anthony hadn't said anything more just then, but long after. Martha knew he had never for a moment forgotten. "Has it ever occurred to you, Martha, that I might have you committed to an institution for the insane?" He had asked her just before Christmae when she tossed five one-hundred dollar bills into the living-room five. She had

She had done it solely to anger him, and she was pleased with herself. But as time went on, Anthony's words becan to take on an ominous meaning. He had addressed that question to her, but actually he had been asking himself. "Can I have

Threading her way through the heavy evening traffic at a speed that left an almost unbroken line of startiled and frequently audible protesting pedestrians and drivers in the wake, Sandra came at last into Fifth Avenue, cut the wheel sharply to the right, and kicked the accelerator. Over and over she thought, "If only I can get there in time . If only I'm not too late to—to prevent it." Not knowing what it was she feared, and fearing it with the greater horror because she could not know.

A light flashed from green to yellow—to red. But only the corner of her eyes caught the red; she had not lifted her foot from the throttle pedal. Then she saw the red light ahead, the series of red lights that dotted the distance between her and that white marble tomb the Ancells called home.

She had no time for lights now, no time for anything . She

Two more blocks is read to the right, slammed on the brakes, jumped out of the car and walked the thirty feet back to the avenue at so leisurely a pace that when the police car skidded around the corner, its occupants failed to connect a girl strolling along the sidewalk with a shiny roadster parked at the curb. #### Softball Player Suspended for Remainder of 1937 Season

VICTORIA softball officials handed out one of the stiffest sentences in league history, at a special meeting held in The Colonist board room last night. They suspended Gordie Eastwood, third baseman for the Palais de Danse of "C" section, for the remainder of the 1937 season, for his attack on the umpire during Wednesday evening's game against Victoria Brass and Iron Works. Eastwood attempted to settle his differences with the umpire on three different occasions, according to the report tendered at the meeting which, in the opinion of the executive, was a much more serious charge than the one they dealt with earlier this week, when an "A" player was to told to rest up for two games for his frouble with a base umpire. "The players have been given fair warning, and therefore we do not intend to tolerate with these attacks on umpires any longer. The umpires must be protected, and we will see that they are throughout the season," stated President Jack Taylor, last night.

On such an occasion all he is using is determination. He isn't rea-soning very much because he lines up in a way that makes him repeat the mistakes which caused him to miss the first shot. His repeated failures show rather conclusively that something more than a strong will is needed for the job. Will power or determination is a fine thing when properly used, and it would prove most kelpful to every player when coupled with some-thing like the right swing.

If you are among those who miss two or three shots in a row, here is a turn that will put you on the right track. After missing a shot, instead of just making a resolution to hit the next one better, try to locate your faults and concentrate on eliminating them in the very next swing. Set aside though about the result until you have corrected your swing.

If your head turned or raise during the downswing, make sure that it is kept in the proper posi-tion until well after the bell has

Jane Dixon Says:

ANY WOMAN WORTH WHILE WOULD RATHER TAKE A STREET CAR RIDE WITH THE MAN SHE LOVES THAN A SPIN IN A DE LUXE SEDAN WITH THE OTHER FELLOW

In the eyes of love, the homeliest man on earth makes Robert Taylor, Clark Gable, Errol Flynn and all the glamor boys look like selling

When love snaps the whip we dance, and we don't stop to ask the color of our partner's eyes. All our lives we've been dreaming about the one and only with eyes to shame a hyacinth blue and hair that's borrowed its gold from the sunshine. Then we fall like a ton of lead bricks for one strictly in the brown tones, or even the mouse grays.

A man with bow legs and too much weight for age becomes a god straight from Olympus to the woman who loves him.

Dear Miss Dixon: You are listening in to a fellow in love with a girl who is extremely attractive, and with a smile that tops all smiles.

Miss Dixon, this girl I love so much is attracted to another chap re than she is to me. He has black curly hair and a car. I have

The girl knows I love her. I never have kissed her. You may say, "How strange?" There's a reason, a slight inferiority complex on my part because of my looks. I'm afraid she'd resent my kissing her. Maybe I should have taken a chance and let nature run its course.

HIS BEST OFFERING IS HIS LOVE

As to my looks—glasses dull the sparkle in my eyes, and I stutter times when I am with the girl. It's because of the way she looks at me. I'm rather short and stumpy, and I don't make much money. I'm extremely jealous, and she knows it.

With only my love to offset these defects, do you think I have a hance? Maybe your reply will be the answer I've been waiting for, one that leads to marriage and to happiness.—Defenseless, Answer—You can't do much about your physical defects—if you o place your glasses and your lack of height in that category—but your jealousy is strictly your own personally conducted nuisance. Why don't you rid yourself of that, and so cross one minus sign off your list?

As to your right. Napoleon wasn't so tall either. But he had Josephine, one of the most intriguing women of all history. The women who gave their hearts to Napoleon would fill two thick volumes in any

So you see, Defenseless, it isn't how you look, but what you have within you.

WHAT A DULL MAN LOOKS LIKE

My idea of a dull man is a hand-ome fellow with a marcel wave chissled features—nothing above his eyebrows but his hair. But we come to a subject more important than the physical one.

The girl you adore loves your friend.

There is nothing you can do about that. Love goes where it wills thas no more sense about its flight than a butterfly in an old-weed sarden.

You are right in your diagnosis of yourself. You have an inferiority mplex. You are blaming your failure to attract the girl you love on ur lack of black curly hair and a car, whereas it appears to be because loves the other fellow.

Forget it! Any girl or any woman worth while would rather take a street car ride with the man she loves than a spin in a de luxe sedan with the other

Here's a tip—I'm sure I wouldn't be interested in a man who was everpowered by me that he stuttered in my presence. I'd think he was pretty weak. (Copyright, 1937, by Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

West, after following to two rounds of clubs, began to agonize over his discards. His first discard over his discards. His first discard was easy—a low diamond, and on the fourth club he heroically (although reductantly) parted with a low spade. The fifth club seemed to give him less trouble than the preceding ones. To his partner's anguish he nonchantly filipped out his remaining "worthless" heart.
